They Believe in LaSalle!

LaSalle, IL- Two small town girls are using their talents, their “since we were in grade school” friendship, and their big dream mentality to bring a most unique business to downtown LaSalle.

Kristine’s Shower just celebrated 11 years of hand making bath and skincare products, a big milestone that turns out to be one of a few just in 2013. Jenny Hoehn began in 2002 in her home formulating soaps and bathbombs (scented fizzing bath “accessories”). She jokingly says, “I was soap! I lived and breathed making this stuff.” Having attended beauty school, she learned the science behind these products and went to work creating the bath and skincare products that would make her skin feel soft and smooth, without aggravating her allergies.

Today Jenny and her Kristine’s Shower team meet the evergrowing demand for her natural, handmade line with the same “small batch” techniques that made Kristine’s Shower famous.

Although the pairing of the art of making bathbombs, soaps, etc., with fine art may seem somewhat unlikely, these two are determined to make it work!

White Trash Peg, as she has become known, has quite the following as well. Her art not only showcases her natural talent, it reveals her take on the world in a unique way. She has shown in galleries across the United States (New York, San Francisco and other major cities), as well as internationally in Paris and Berlin but her heart is in LaSalle right now. White Trash Gallery will showcase White Trash Peg’s work as well as serve emerging and established artists in North Central IL and beyond.

These longtime friends have seen each other succeed in what they love. “Nothing is better than being able to help each other grow, and we are so happy that we finally have a chance to house our different passions under one roof!”, says Jenny. Peg and Jenny agree that LaSalle is the perfect place for White Trash Gallery, and they are working together to transform a once lawyer office, into a spectacular space that will also carry the entire Kristine’s Shower line.

The opening for White Trash Gallery is set for October 18, 2013, at 139 Gooding Street in LaSalle. More details will be released, but you can count on an exciting and unique opportunity to see some great art, and get some great natural, handmade soap, lotion and bathbombs. Stay tuned...
